Killer Sets Mill Valley Home Afire

MILL VALLEY—A prominent Mill Valley couple and their 19-year-old son were killed, apparently by a volley from a shotgun, on the patio of their home shortly before 4 a.m. today.

The bodies were found by the light of flames from the home, apparently torched by the slayer.

Dead were Melvin J. Schallock, 62, a partner in the Oakland-based food brokerage firm of Kelley-Clarke Co.; his wife, Ruth, 56, and their son, Daniel, 19.

The three bodies were lined up on the patio in night clothing, with about a dozen empty shotgun shells lying nearby, according to Police Chief William Walsh.

The family sedan, parked at the curb just down the hill from the Schallock home at 217 Summit Ave. had the windshield and two side windows blown out, apparently by shotgun fire. Daniel's small sports car, parked a little farther away, had one of its windows smashed and two shotgun shells were found nearby.

Schallock, a member of the Mill Valley Police Reserve, was well known and well-liked in the community, said Chief Walsh.

Walsh said a neighbor called police at 2:57 a.m. reporting screams for help, several loud shots and a series of rapid "pops."

Police arrived at the home within a minute or so, Walsh said, and found the home afire.

Firemen extinguished the blaze and found two jerry cans, one near the front door and another near an interior doorway, Fire Dept. Capt. Joseph Pamurini said the blaze was almost certainly arson. He estimated damages at $15,000.

The police chief, terming the slaying "the worst tragedy in Mill Valley in the 15 years I've been here," said no weapon has been found, nor has there been an arrest.

He revealed that a neighbor had reported seeing a youth on the stairway of the Schallock home carrying what was believed to have been a shotgun — at about the time of the shootings.

Schallock and his wife were lifelong residents of Mill Valley.

The couple married shortly after her graduation from the University of California at Berkeley in 1930.

Schallock went to work for Kelley-Clarke Co. in 1933 and worked his way up to partnership in the firm. The firm was headquartered in San Francisco until three years ago when

Civilian, Cop Shot; Man Held

RODGER WALLIS
Stomach wounds

An Oakland policeman and another man were shot and wounded during a gas station robbery and shootout, a subsequent chase and a second shootout with two bandits in East Oakland last night.

One of the robbers was also wounded, apparently, and a suspect was later arrested at San Leandro Memorial Hospital where he was seeking treatment for bullet wounds in the ankle and foot.

The patrolman, Rodger A. Wallis, 24, engaged in summon help and broadcast a description of the robbers despite a grave stomach wound which could easily have killed him. He was in fair condition today at Merritt Hospital with a bullet wound in the abdomen and a crease wound on the head.

The other victim, Gilbert Lawrence, 50, of Oakland, was critically wounded when he, too, engaged in a shootout with the robbers at the Powerine gas station at 4255 MacArthur Blvd. He was in critical condition today at Highland Hospital with a bullet wound in the chest and two more in the arm.

Deputy Police Chief Tom Donohue related the series of events this way:

About 1:30 a.m. today two men drove into the Powerine gas station with guns and demanded that an unidentified attendant hand over his money. The attendant told them that since the gas station accepted only exact change or credit cards at night, he had only small change on hand.

They took what he had—less than $15—but for some reason did not leave immediately.

At this point Lawrence drove in for some gas, and the attendant told him of the robbery and asked that he go somewhere and summon police.

But Lawrence said that he had a weapon and would attempt to apprehend the robbers. He got out of his car with a .38 caliber handgun and approached the robbers. A shootout ensued, Lawrence falling to the concrete apron wounded several times.

The robbers, abandoning their own car, took Law-

10 Years to Life Term For Barger

Hell's Angel leader Ralph (Sonny) Barger was sentenced to a 10-year-to-life term in prison on four counts of narcotics violations, of which he was found guilty in a jury trial.

He was sentenced today by Superior Court Judge William J. Hayes.

Barger, 34, heard the sentence in a heavily guarded courtroom, in which his girl friend, Sharon Grubike, and his sister, Mrs. Shirley Rodgers, were in attendance.

Barger's attorney, James Crew, immediately filed a notice of appeal. Judge Hayes denied Crew's motion for Barger's release on bail, pending action on the appeal.

Barger had been charged with the four narcotic violations, possession of heroin for sale, possession of cocaine, possession of dangerous drugs and possession of marijuana, in a raid on his Golf Links Road home last May.

Yesterday, Barger failed to receive court permission to marry Miss Grubike.

Four Superior Court judges declined to sign a removal order to allow Barger to leave the Courthouse jail for the ceremony and Sheriff Frank I. Madigan refused to permit the wedding on the jail's 10th floor.

Madigan insisted that Barger, convicted Feb. 23, was a ward of the court and that he could be removed from his custody for any such event only with a judge's signed order.

Courthouse sources disclosed that efforts had been made since Monday for the wedding and that Miss Grubike, one-time Maid of Livermore, had obtained the required blood test as a preliminary to securing a marriage license.

However, permission was denied by trial Judge William J. Hayes, presiding Judge Lionel J. Wilson and criminal Judge George W. Phillips Jr.

Efforts of Barger family members to reach Judge Surgeon Avakian, a pro tem presiding jurist, failed at the last minute.

Judge Hayes flatly refused the request and Judge Wilson turned down Miss Grubike's attorney without reading the petition.

The chilly judicial treatment was ascribed variously to these reasons:

A security factor in prison during conjugal visits; the privilege of a wife not to testify against her husband; pending trials against both parties; provisions of the welfare law permitting $100 a month in aid

Pact to End Dollar Crisis Agreed Upon

PARIS (AP) — The United States and 13 important trading nations agreed today on ways to end the monetary crisis and get an orderly system of exchanging their currencies.

They said that each nation will be ready to go into the market in close consultation with the others to trade one currency against another.

George P. Shultz, secretary of the Treasury, agreed on behalf of the United States to review measures that might make it easier for capital to flow into the United States. He also said the United States would look into action that would encourage the $80 billion now deposited abroad to flow back to the United States "as market conditions permit."

These funds are American dollars deposited abroad and known as Eurodollars. One way to bring some of them back would be to raise interest rates in the United States.

The decisions were announced after discussions by Shultz and a group of Western finance ministers and governors of central banks.

The final statement explained that the U.S. promise to free the flow of dollars from the United States by the end of 1974 was intended to go along with a strong improvement in the U.S. balance of payments — now in heavy deficit.

The agreement said:

"Any steps taken during the interim period toward the elimination of these controls would take due account of exchange market conditions and balance of payments trends."

Europeans have expressed fears that unlimited flows of dollars out of the United States would bring important chunks of foreign industry into American hands.

The ministers said it was important to do something to hold down the flow of hot money across frontiers.

The meeting said the participants still want the greatest possible freedom for international trade and investment and to avoid changing their rates of exchange in competition with one another.

The statement said that the way to get international stability in monetary affairs was to contain inflation.

The ministers agreed they were confident that these steps will start a program to deal with the recent increases in speculation and keep the currency markets in order while they work on a basic reform of the international monetary system.

Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, chairman of the meeting, told reporters earlier that there had been a convergence of views between Secretary Shultz and all the others.

West German officials said Shultz had agreed that if necessary the United States would use existing "swap" arrangements to keep the price of the dollar from dropping. Under these arrangements about $11.75 billion worth of foreign currencies are available, which the U.S. Federal Reserve System can borrow to intervene in markets. At what point President Nixon's administration would consider it necessary to do this was not made clear—that would be too good a tip for the speculators.

The West Germans also said the Americans are ready to take measures to encourage the return to the United States of short-term capital. Again, the time and the circumstances were left vague.

Shultz has announced that limits on the outflow of capital from the United States will be eliminated by the end of 1974. The West Germans quoted him as explaining that this was planned on the assumption that America's international payments would then be in balance.

The West German officials said all the countries concerned agreed that they are ready to use the swap arrangements and that these might even be expanded.

They also quoted Shultz as telling the 13 other countries at the meeting that present exchange rates are realistic from the viewpoint of trade and that the United States is ready to cooperate to maintain the existing system.

No decision was made, these sources said, on sales of gold by central banks.

Nixon Has Options Short of Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon could order a range of military actions short of renewed bombing of North Vietnam and still back up his statement that he will not stand for major Communist infiltration of South Vietnam.

In taking a hard line yesterday, Nixon gave no hint of what move he might make if his warning against continued violation of the cease-fire agreement is ignored by Hanoi.

The President did not foreclose the possibility of sending U.S. bombers back over the North, but there are a number of important deterrents to this.

For one thing, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong could hold back the remaining U.S. war prisoners as hostages.

For another, the North Vietnamese have strengthened their antiaircraft defenses since the Jan. 27 cease-fire and any new U.S. raids almost certainly would cost the United States more planes and fresh casualties, including additional POWs.

The political consequences of a renewed war with North Vietnam are incalculable. But it would be logical to expect a severe reaction from the nation and the Congress, which have come to believe the long and costly Indochina war is over for the United States.

Pentagon officials stressed what one of them called "practical options" for military action without bombing North Vietnam again.

U.S. war planes could be unleashed once more to strike at the Ho Chi Minh trail, the main infiltration network running through southern Laos toward South Vietnam.

American bombers also could be ordered to strike at the Laotian end of the key passes leading out of North Vietnam into the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Also, American air power could be sent once more against Communist targets in South Vietnam, including the region just below the DMZ where the North Vietnamese are reported to have crossed with reinforcements and supplies since the cease-fire, which banned such movements.

The United States could suspend withdrawal of the remaining 6,000-plus American troops from South Vietnam and the operation aimed at clearing U.S. mines from the important North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

On the diplomatic level, the Nixon administration might let North Vietnam know pointedly that it will refrain from pushing for reconstruction aid until Hanoi abides by all terms of the cease-fire agreement. U.S. diplomats might suggest to the Soviet Union and China that

Nejedly to Seek Seat Of Waldie

By ED SALZMAN
Tribune Capitol Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, intends to run for the congressional seat that will be vacated by Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Antioch, next year.

Nejedly, 38, stated unequivocally that he intends to run and feels he can provide Contra Costa County with a dozen years of good representation in Washington.

Waldie has already announced that he will run for governor next year and will not be seeking re-election to Congress.

Nejedly probably will be able to seek Waldie's seat without endangering his political career because his present Senate term will not expire until 1976.

There is some chance, however, that all 40 Senate seats will be up for grabs next year if the state Supreme Court eventually reapportions the state legislature.

Nejedly said he rejects the contention of those who claim he may be too old to start a career in Congress, where it traditionally takes many years to reach a position of influence because of the seniority system.

"That's what they said when I came to Sacramento," he said. "Within a year, I was chairman of the Local Government Committee." He now heads the Committee on Natural Resources.

Nejedly was elected to the Senate in March of 1969 following the death of Sen. George Miller Jr. D-Martinez. Nejedly had previously served as Contra Costa County district attorney for 11 years.

The senator said that if he is elected to Congress he will concentrate on issues affecting Contra Costa County, such as protection of the San Joaquin Delta and opposition to the peripheral canal around the Delta.

Nejedly said the only other politician who has indicated a likelihood that he will run for the congressional seat is Concordian Dan Helix of Concord, a Democrat and former administrative assistant to Sen. Nicholas C. Petris, D-Oakland.

Viet Cong Free 32 Prisoners

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — The Viet Cong released 32 more American prisoners of war today, and the senior officer in the group thanked President Nixon for ordering the bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong last December.

Air Force Col. Theodore W. Guy of Tucson, Ariz., told a welcoming crowd at Clark Air Base he has no doubts that the heavy bombing of North Vietnam's two main cities helped hasten the end of the war.

"We are grateful that we had a President that made those decisions," said Guy, 43. He was captured when his Phantom fighter-bomber was downed during a strike mission over Laos on March 22, 1968.

"Dignity, honor and love of country are three things that most of us treasured and thought of for many years," Guy said. "On behalf of the men in this group, I would like

Regents Raise Budget Request

The University of California Board of Regents today approved a new 1973-74 budget figure asking the state to replace $10.1 million in federal cutbacks.

Meeting in San Francisco, the board also requested $600,000 to cover new utility rate increases.

Another late budget revision lent credibility to speculation that U.C. may close down one or more campuses because of decreasing enrollment.

U.C. Prof. Charles J. Hitch said the budget request should be trimmed back $2.3 million because enrollments have fallen further behind projections.

On the basis of applications for next fall, Hitch revised the predicted enrollment downward to 99,637 students from 100,464. This year's figure is 96,948.

Figures for next fall's expected enrollment make it clear that the Riverside campus is in deep trouble. This year, U.C.-Riverside has 6,377 students.

The administration expects a drop to 5,715 next fall. Gov. Ronald Reagan's 4-H panel this prediction to 5,178. Now the enrollment looks like 4,782, and Hitch is recommending a 25 per cent budget cut for the campus.

Enrollment at Santa Barbara is expected to drop to 12,165 from the present 12,416. The newest estimate is 11,577, which would mean a 6.9 per cent budget trim.

But perhaps the most surprising enrollment drop is the last, at U.C.-Irvine, one of the newest campuses in the system. Enrollment was supposed to jump to 8,101 from 7,613, but now it looks like a drop to 7,246.

The only general campus expecting a marked increase is Davis, which will grow to 5,348 students from 4,786, about as predicted.

Hitch said U.C. could lose as much as $104 million in federal funds in the next two years, although the losses might be offset by new grants. This, he said, made the deficit hard to calculate.

Hitch noted that the new $10.1 million request for offsetting state aid is "for those programs which are an integral part of the university's basic instruction and research mission."

Federal losses for the next budget year might be $38 million, he said.

Because of the predicted enrollment drop, Hitch is cutting 47 positions from his request for 144 new faculty members. Reagan's budget includes a cut of 46, which Hitch says is inadequate.

Walters, IRS Chief, Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) President Nixon has accepted the resignation of Johnnie M. Walters as Internal Revenue Service commissioner, the White House announced today.

Walters, from Greenville, S.C., has been the nation's top tax collector since August 1971 and his desire to return to private law practice has been known for several months.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, is saying that Nixon had accepted Walters' resignation "with deep regret," said a successor had not been selected for the $40,000-a-year post.
