Oakland skyline may get 10-story boost

Skyscraper proposed for 17th and Broadway

OAKLAND — A San Francisco-based developer is proposing to build what would be downtown Oakland's tallest skyscraper at the corner of 17th Street and Broadway, raising the city's skyline by nearly 10 stories.

The proposal by Joseph Hernon, principal of 1640 Broadway Associates, includes a mix of 200-plus parking spaces, ground-floor retail, seven floors of offices and 146 two- and three-story townhouse-style apartments or condominiums.

If all goes smoothly, the project could break ground by the end of the year.

The 390-foot-high building is the equivalent of 36 stories, but the design's extra-high ceilings would reduce the number of floors to 24, said Marge Cafarelli of Urban Developments, a consultant on the project.

The developers have not yet signed up tenants but expect to draw from the exploding dot-com and multimedia industries.

"We're excited about high-density development on Broadway near transit," said Leslie Gould, the city's director for planning and zoning. The project could stimulate more development in that section of Broadway, she said.

"What really stimulates it is the market," she added. "The anecdotal feedback we get is that the market for office (space) has become more and more desirable."

Also in response to the growing demand for office space, the Shorenstein Co. is moving forward on a 20-story office tower on the block bordered by 11th and 12th streets and Clay and Jefferson streets.

Oakland nursing magazine unveiled

Publication to seek health 'Revolution'

By Lisa Friedman
WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON — They call it "Revolution" but "counterrevolution" might be a more apt name for the new Oakland-based nursing magazine.

"There's already been a revolution in health care, a very unfortunate and bad revolution," said editor Chuck Idelson. "We're confronting the corporate power that has taken over our health industry."

The magazine, unveiled here Tuesday, is a backlash against the things nurses say managed care has spawned: woefully understaffed hospital wards where nurses care for as many as 16 patients at once and unlicensed staff start IVs and insert catheters.

"Revolution: The Journal for RNs and Patient Advocacy," will be the first publication in the country to focus on nursing and aggressively advocate for legislative and policy changes. The debut issue, for instance, features practical tips for whistle-

Dow skyrockets to mark largest gain in 17 months

By Robert D. Hershey Jr.
NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK — In a reversal of fortune, blue-chip stocks recorded their biggest gain in 17 months Wednesday, while the technology-dominated Nasdaq market slumped.

The Nasdaq stocks that have been so beloved by investors as the engines of the new economy have in three days lost a stunning 9.2 percent, just short of what Wall Street considers a correction.

On Wednesday, investors piled instead into financial, drug and other high-quality stocks that have been old economy laggards. They drove the Dow Jones industrial average up 320.17 points, or 3.3 percent, to 10,131.41, paring its loss so far this year to 11.9 percent. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 33 points, or 2.4 percent, to 1,392.15, narrowing its loss for the year to 5.25 percent.

Some of the money, stock analysts said, came from sales of Nasdaq stocks. The Nasdaq composite index skidded 124.01 points, or 2.6 percent, to 4,582.62 just three days after hitting a record 5,048.62.

"Two things are going on," said Alfred Goldman, chief market strategist at A.G. Edwards in St. Louis. "You're getting some bottom-fishing for the really strong values that had developed and some long overdue profit-taking in the new economy stocks."

Helping to lead Wednesday's heavy stock trading was a report on industrial output last month that some took as a sign the economy's breakneck expansion might finally be slowing. If the members of the Federal Reserve board believe this is happening — and the production figures are compiled by the central bank — it reduces the chance of several increases in interest rates and could rule out a jump of more than one-

Big oil merger is back on track

U.S. puts challenge to $30 billion deal on hold

By H. Josef Hebert

WASHINGTON — A merger of BP Amoco and Atlantic Richfield Co. was back on the table Wednesday as the Federal Trade Commission and the companies agreed to examine a revised proposal aimed at easing the government's concerns about competition.

The government indefinitely put on hold a lawsuit that had challenged the $30 billion deal that would create the world's second-largest nongovernment oil company.

The FTC said it would soon resume talks with the two companies on whether the new proposal resolved fears that the new company would have too much control over Alaska oil production.

The breakthrough came after Atlantic Richfield, also known as Arco, agreed to sell all of its holdings in Alaska, where the two companies currently control about 70 percent of the North Slope oil assets and operations.

"In light of the substantial and constructive proposals made by the defendants, all parties have agreed to seek adjournment of the federal court proceedings," Richard Parker, director of the agency's Bureau of Competition, said in a statement.

Phillips Petroleum Co. announced late Wednesday it has agreed to buy all of Arco's

Free online university brainchild of billionaire

By Jacques Steinberg
NEW YORK TIMES

A 35-year-old software billionaire said Wednesday that he would spend $100 million to realize his vision of 21st century higher education: a giant free Web site that would provide access to what he calls the "10,000 greatest minds of our time," in lectures and interviews recorded especially for the venture.

Michael Saylor, chief executive of Microstrategy, a technology company in northern Virginia, said in an interview that his goal was "free education for everyone on earth, forever." And he envisions his institution eventually granting degrees in countless disciplines, based on final exams that would be administered once a month in convention halls around the world, with grading done by computer wherever possible.

Harris named to $110,000-a-year post

Ex-Oakland mayor tapped by Gov. Davis

By Steve Geissinger
SACRAMENTO BUREAU

SACRAMENTO — Elihu Harris, the former Oakland mayor and state assemblyman who abruptly fell from political prominence last year, was appointed Wednesday to a $110,000-a-year state job by Gov. Gray Davis.

The governor named Harris, a 52-year-old attorney and fellow Democrat, to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board, an appointment that is not expected to be opposed by the Democrat-dominated Senate charged with considering his confirmation.

The seven-member appeals board oversees a $50 million agency with 500 employees. It hears final appeals of decisions involving state disability and unemployment insurance cases.

Harris, who was not available for comment, will be "a great asset," said board chairman Lou Barnett.

In a surprising turn of events last December, Harris failed to qualify for a March 7 primary election bid to retake his former 16th Assembly District seat because he did not submit 40 valid nomination signatures to the Alameda County elections office.

At first, Harris, who had been
